A BRIEF INTERVIEW

WITH YONI PERITZMAN...
OH YEAH!

FS: Hi Yoni, thanks so much for joining us! We heard you can do a thousand pushups. Is that true!

YP: I can do 999...

FS: gasp scrape chairs back an inch

You let go of everything and came to Yeshiva. How do you like it here? It's amazing. I thought it would be harder to adjust but this feels like the real me, so it's natural. I'm just annoyed I didn't do this sooner!

FS: Such an awesome answer. To our understanding, you worked at the Kotel security team before coming here. Any crazy stories?

YP: Once time a bunch of people tried bringing a live lamb to shecht, that was pretty nuts.

FS: Oh yeah a lamb. I had a dream last night...there was no lamb in it, but what's one thing people should (should!?) know about you?

YP: I love Disney movies. And I lived in the Muslim Quarter for a year.

FS: Interesting! Thanks so much for sitting with us Yoni!

YP: That's it? Sababa.

VACCINES, AND WHAT NOT

WITH SULLIVAN B. GRABEL
PHD MD. AKA TZVI KOENIG

Through some extensive studies in the years' most popularly researched subject, the COVID 19 vaccine, I've come up with a few conclusions of my own. But my stupefied scientific discoveries didn't start in the University of Arabia, where I received my education, but rather through my travels. When I was in the middle of the Middle East; Modiin Illit, I came across a sort of a campus of the likes I've never seen before. I instantly became overwhelmed and missed my own University of Arabia. This campus was smack in between a whole bunch of industrial nonsense and a charedi city called 'Curious Sefer'. I was shocked at the growth per capita... Anyway, seeing that the young kind gentlemen here where all vacc'd up, I decided to scientifically begin taking note of any unusual behavior.

Once I began analyzing the Bachrim, things took a turn. I realized that subject #347i or "Yehuda Mittel" as affectionately called by his fellows- that after taking the vaccine cant stop saying: "Thank you HaShem". Strange. Another case was subject #9hundred, whose hair, as bizarre as it sounds, only grows long from above and behind the ears... this was a common find. Lastly, from one of the strangest revelations was an individual by the name of Getzel, who shortly after receiving both doses of Pfizer grew horns! But my colleagues have informed me that the 'growing of horns' is a non-lethal side effect for goats.

In conclusion I've come to realize that this yeshiva breathes; respect for one another, true growth and love for Torah to the extent that the world as we know it has yet to witness. This place of power, with Rabbi Fischer at its head, will, Be'h lead the future of our world of true devotion to G-d, sanity and success in all areas of life.

I, Tzvi Koenig feel fortunate to be surrounded by every single guy here in yeshiva, I feel like I'm with the sweetest and best of the best! IM SPEAKING TO YOU! I love you guys! Have a life changing Lag Baomer! And a Gut Shabbos Kodesh!

I WAS THERE!

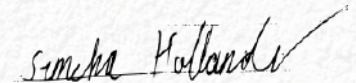

WITH RABBI HOLLANDER

That seder was just awesome! Amazing! Unbelievable! It was just something that I believe I will never forget.

I don't mean just the achdus between everyone, how they all shared matzos and wine or how they all chipped in with the cooking, but I mean the spiritual part of the seder. Just to listen to Shaya Lexier's sweet voice saying the Kiddush and leading the Haggadah, to watch Avi Lowinger & Shalom Tannenbaum managing to eat that sharp radish for maror, to see Yehuda Kastel and Moshe Perlstein with their Dveikus and concentration whilst preparing for the Vanitzak with Shlomo Zalman Auerbach's shouting at the top of his voice, together with Rabbi Erbllich's chazanus and Reb Yehuda Mittel's enlightening comments, it was something that I have never experienced in my life.

And that's besides sitting and watching the Koenig brothers going through the Haggadah at their own pace with their own vortim, listening to Shimon Delange davening to Hashem to be able to connect to Him, being amazed how JJ Lefkovitz was so excited about the story of Yetzias Mitzrayim & how many questions Yitzi Shapiro had on the Haggadah, and last but not least having Shuey Klein mesmerizing us with his speech how he wants to grow and feel closer to Hashem and how much he loves all of us.

Just sitting there reminded me of what I heard from our dear friend Zalmy Botwinick, that the reason why the Jewish nation is compared to the stars is because just like the stars look so small from a distance, but become larger as you get closer to them, so it is with the Yidden - the closer you get to them, the more you appreciate them.

COMING HOME

WITH YOSSI TISCHLER

Being lock out of the borders of the Holy Land for a couple of months

The first few weeks were ok. I went on some ski trips, shabbatons, traveled to Texas and LA, eating good pizza and good meat... But then boredom really hit. If you're not working, there's not much to do. I was blessed with having a really good friend there which kept me from getting lost in the sauce. I joined a night seder program that kept me sane. One thing I realized is that being part of a yeshiva is a major key!

I'm really happy to be back in the Holy Land with all of you! We should all have an amazing summer zman!
